The opportunity

Bayleys is pleased to offer Pikarere Farm for sale by way of Tender closing on 22nd May, 2026 at 2.00pm.

Pikarere Farm presents a rare opportunity to secure one of New Zealand's most significant coastal landholdings, combining scale, natural presence, and proven productive capability.

Spanning approximately 742 hectares and nearly six kilometres of Cook Strait coastline, the property balances expansive coastal outlooks with a well-established sheep and beef operation. The land is varied and functional, supporting both breeding and finishing across sheltered valleys and elevated country, underpinned by reliable coastal rainfall and regenerating pasture.

Held within the same family for more than seventy years, the property reflects continuity of ownership and a considered approach to both land use and long-term stewardship. At its centre sits the architect designed homestead by Bernard Johns, supported by additional dwellings and a comprehensive range of farm infrastructure, allowing for immediate continuation of operations or future repositioning.

Despite its scale and sense of seclusion, Wellington lies within easy reach, placing international connections, commerce, and amenity close at hand.

Opportunities of this calibre, where coastline, productive land, and proximity align, are seldom presented to the market.

Please do not hesitate to contact a member of the project team regarding any aspect of the content included in this document or to arrange a viewing of the property.

The property

The landform at Pikarere Farm is both varied and functional, comprising rolling to moderately steep country that unfolds toward the coastline. Elevated ridgelines provide expansive outlooks across Cook Strait, while sheltered valleys support pasture growth and livestock management.

The balance of contour allows for a working sheep and beef operation, with a mix of grazing platforms suited to both breeding and finishing. Natural shelter, combined with coastal climate conditions, contributes to a resilient farming environment.

The scale of the property provides operational flexibility, whether continuing current farming practices or exploring alternative land use over time. The combination of productive land, natural features, and coastline establishes a property that is both commercially viable and strategically significant.

Property address	320 – 380 Pikarere Street

Area

Total Titled Area: 742 hectares (freehold title). A substantial coastal/rural holding with diverse productive and conservation elements. See page 9 for more information on titles and the area breakdown.

Native Bush & Protected Areas:

Approximately 50.69 hectares of fenced-off native bush, providing significant ecological value, biodiversity habitat, and natural shelter/buffer zones across the property's contours. Of this, 7.2527 hectares is protected by a Queen Elizabeth II National Trust (QEII) open space covenant, a voluntary, legally binding agreement registered against the title to safeguard indigenous ecosystems in perpetuity. The covenant "runs with the land," binding all future owners and prohibiting activities that could harm the protected values (e.g., clearance, burning, or development within the covenanted area). QEII provides ongoing monitoring, specialist advice, and potential access to support funds for management (e.g., pest control). This small covenanted portion represents excellent long-term environmental stewardship without materially impacting overall farm operations.

Current livestock policy

This productive mixed sheep and beef property supports a well-established, dual-purpose livestock enterprise with proven performance across varied terrain types.

Sheep

- Breeds & Land Suitability: Wiltshire sheep (self-shedding, hardy, suited to colonial knob country + scrub country/rougher terrain) for low-maintenance grazing on tougher pastures; Romney sheep (robust, wool/meat dual-purpose, thrives in cleaner country/improved pastures) for higher-production areas.
- Breeding: 1900 ewes separated into two mobs.
- Shearing: Conducted January/February annually.
- Lamb Production: 1,400 lambs typically finished and sent to meat works (via CR Grace).
- Replacements: 400 ewe hogget retained into winter for flock replacement and growth.

Beef

- 130 Angus cows.
  - Dual calving seasons provide 68 Autumn calving and 62 Spring calving production and cashflow flexibility

Current Pasture & Crop

Dominant species: Perennial ryegrass, New Zealand's most widely used pasture grass, renowned for excellent adaptability, high dry matter production, superior digestibility, and compatibility with grazing systems.

Regeneration benefit: No cropping for the past 3 years. The land has been intentionally rested from cultivation, allowing natural regeneration. This break has enhanced soil structure, organic matter, nutrient cycling, and overall pasture resilience, positioning the sward for sustained productivity and drought tolerance.

Grazing suitability: Hardy Wiltshire sheep perform well on rougher colonial knob and scrub country; dual-purpose Romney sheep thrive on the cleaner, improved ryegrass-dominant areas for optimal meat and wool output.

Rotational grazing maintains quality, residuals, and long-term sward health across the property. Buyers are encouraged to review current soil/nutrient tests, water systems, and Regional Council rules for any intensification plans.

Rainfall & Climate

Pikarere Farm enjoys a classic temperate oceanic climate (Köppen Cfb) — mild year-round, with moderate temperatures, reliable rainfall, and exposure to strong Cook Strait westerlies. Located on the western slopes of the Colonial Knob ridge, the property benefits from slightly elevated contours that provide orographic lift, enhancing rainfall compared to lower Porirua areas. Weather can change quickly on exposed sections, typical of the region.

Rainfall

- Mean annual rainfall: 1,000–1,200 mm across the western Porirua catchment (including Colonial Knob slopes), rising to 1,200–1,400 mm eastward. This is higher than lower-elevation coastal zones due to hill-country effects.
- Seasonal pattern: Evenly distributed but distinctly wetter in winter (peak in June) and drier in summer. Typical monthly averages (1991–2021 data for Porirua):
  - January/February: ~59 mm (driest)
  - June: ~99 mm (wettest)
  - Annual total: ~926–1,200+ mm depending on exact elevation and exposure.
- Winter flows are higher; summer can see occasional dry spells, but rainfall is reliable year-round for pasture growth.

Temperature & Other Climate Factors

- Average annual temperature: 12.5 °C.
  - Summer (Dec–Feb): Highs 18–19 °C, lows ~13–14 °C.
  - Winter (Jun–Aug): Highs 9–12 °C, lows ~7–8 °C.
  - Prevailing westerlies bring fresh, sometimes strong winds (especially on Colonial Knob ridges), with high humidity (76–80 %) and moderate sunshine hours (highest in summer).

Pump/water Information

The property features a reliable, self-sufficient freshwater supply sourced from a bush stream, delivering high-quality water for domestic, farm, and stock requirements with minimal ongoing costs.

System Overview

- Source & Delivery: Gravity-fed from a bush stream to two storage tanks (25,000 liters each), providing substantial buffer capacity for consistent year-round supply.
- Treatment & Pressure: Sand filtration and ultra-violet (UV) disinfection ensures quality standards are met; a pressure pump system maintains approximately 60 psi for efficient flow.
- Coverage: Supplies the four houses, woolshed, killing house, and approximately 30 farm stock troughs — supporting full household use, shearing activities, and livestock watering across the property's contours.

Compliance & Status

- The current take and use operate as a permitted activity under the Resource Management Act 1991 (RMA) and relevant regional plan provisions. No resource consent or water permit is required for reasonable domestic and stock drinking purposes.
- Gravity-fed design reduces energy needs and enhances reliability; the system has supported the existing mixed sheep/beef operation effectively.

For the most current and detailed council information on water supply, zoning, consents, potential natural hazards, drainage, or any site-specific rules, purchasers should refer to the Land Information Memorandum (LIM) report.

Fencing Farm Layout

The farm is extremely well fenced and divided into approximately 45 paddocks, with a mix of conventional and electric fencing.

Property information

Fertiliser history

The central valley was used for active cropping and re-grassing, with fertiliser applied during that rotation to support cultivation. Cropping stopped 3 years ago.

Farm contours and Topography

Key Contour Features

- The majority of the farm, especially the Rural Lifestyle-zoned area, features gentle to moderate contours that provide outstanding, expansive views across Cook Strait. On clear days, the outlook encompasses a remarkable array of landmarks: Tory Channel, The Brothers Islands, D'Urville Island, Stephens Island, Mana Island, Kapiti Island, and even distant Mt Taranaki. From select vantage points, Mt Ruapehu is visible on exceptionally clear days, delivering one of the region's most impressive and rare panoramic vistas.
- The Rural Lifestyle land is easily traversable by four-wheel drive, ensuring practical access for enjoyment, maintenance, or potential subdivision/lifestyle development.
- To the south, the General Rural-zoned coastal portion mirrors similar manageable contours, supporting seamless farming operations across the property.

Coastal Boundary & Features

- An impressive approximately 6 km "blue water" sea boundary enhances the property's seclusion and appeal.
  - At the midpoint lies Waterfall Bay, a picturesque sandy swimming beach of around 300 meters in length. This is the last significant sandy beach along the west coast until Lyall Bay near Wellington Airport, underscoring its uniqueness, privacy, and recreational value in an otherwise rugged coastline.

Dwelling details

Designed by renowned New Zealand architect Bernard Johns and completed in 1950, the residence sits confidently within its landscape, positioned to capture expansive views across farmland and the coastline beyond. Generous proportions, defined living areas, and enduring materials reflect both the era of its design and the scale of the land it occupies. Over time, the home has been carefully enhanced, including the addition of an indoor heated swimming pool, outdoor entertaining areas, and conveniently placed, powered stables ensuring it remains both functional and considered. Supported by additional accommodation and surrounding infrastructure, the residence forms the central anchor of the estate.

Living

Multiple living environments arranged across the home, including a formal sitting room, separate dining room, and a secondary living area connected to the kitchen. The central kitchen and dining space is supported by both a butler's pantry and walk-in pantry, with an adjoining sitting area. Additional functional spaces include a large laundry, mudroom with WC, and a poolside dining room integrated with the outdoor entertaining zone.

Bedrooms

The primary suite includes a private sitting area, walk-in robe, and ensuite. Additional accommodation is positioned on the upper level, comprising three further bedrooms

Other rooms

Additional supporting spaces include a dedicated wine cellar, gun safe and storage areas, and a stable building incorporating a technical room housing pool systems and services.

Garaging

Three car garaging is provided, with additional utility space supporting the operational needs of the property.

Features

The residence includes a substantial, heated indoor pool conveniently accessible through the informal dining area. In addition the pool opens to a well curated outdoor entertaining area complete with an open fireplace, built-in seating. A separate tennis court setting includes a pergola and landscaped seating area with fountain, contributing to the wider outdoor environment.
